

It is my understanding the FCC wishes to weaken New Jersey's Do Not Call Program as it is more stringent than the Federal Do No Call List.

I think telemarketing is a serious problem and I am glad to live in a state with such strict laws. I do not think it is right to allow "advertising" over a line that I pay for. If the telephone system became free, I could understand the allowance of telemarketing calls. I still would consider it an annoyance, but at least I wouldn't have to pay to be annoyed.

I do not wish to ever receive a telephone solicitation again and would be very dissapointed, to say the least, if the FCC interfered with the level of protection New Jersey provides me from this hidious problem.
